

Drought May Delay Opening Of Small Game Season In Pa.

Harrisburg, Oct. 21 (AP)—Governor James H. Duff said today that unless rain breaks the month-long drought in Pennsylvania "it will be imperatively necessary" to postpone opening of the commonwealth's small game season due to start on Nov. 1.

"The whole forest area of Pennsylvania is in a more inflammable condition, as a result of this protracted drought than I ever before have seen it," Governor Duff told a news conference.

"If the present drought continues into the period when the hunting season commences, it will be imperatively necessary to postpone the beginning of the hunting season until after we've had sufficient rain to restore forests to normal at this time of the year."

Small Fires So Far

"It's impossible to estimate the dangerous conditions of Pennsylvania's forests," he added.

There are about 800,000 hunters licensed in Pennsylvania to hunt small game.

Asked by a reporter whether large forest fires have been reported to state authorities, Duff said "there have been only small scattered fires" so far.

There are about 15,000,000 acres of forest land in Pennsylvania. Up to mid-August the Department of Forests and Waters reported only about 15,000 acres have been fired compared with averages of 50,000 to 100,000 acres in other years.

Can Close Forests

Under a 1925 law, the governor may proclaim a postponement or closing of the game season upon 24 hours' notice. In addition, he is empowered to close all state forests to visitors.

Duff said persons found starting fires whether with malicious intent or not, might be subject to prosecution for malicious mischief.

The commonwealth's streams, the governor said "are extraordinarily low" because of the dry spell, adding: "We're taking all precautions but we are not geared to cope with any such widespread threat." He disclosed state forest wardens and volunteer workers have been alerted to the "extraordinary danger."

ROTARY HEARS PSYCHOLOGY IS MAKING GAINS

"The biggest achievements in psychology lie ahead," Dr. Kenneth Smoke, head of the psychology department at Gettysburg college, told the local Rotary club Monday evening at its meeting in the YWCA. "Those achievements will be the advancements made in learning how to bring peace to the world."

"There is reason to hope," he added, "that this new science-psychology—will make it possible for man to live more as his Maker intended."

Detailing how psychology has proven of great use in industry and in warfare Smoke added that "one of the great defects lies in the study of psychology for peace. We have made great strides in psychology for war, the famous 'war of nerves,' but we have not gained comparable knowledge for peace."

No Need for War

"However, psychology does not believe that there is a need for war in man, it does not think that man has an instinct which causes war. Men fight when other drives are frustrated, and there is no drive that will be frustrated if there are no wars."

"The power of propaganda to mold the minds of men is practically unlimited if you start the propaganda early enough in a man's life and prevent him from knowing the other side. That power was demonstrated time and again during the last war and is still being demonstrated."

In the industrial field psychology has many uses, Smoke said. "One is in the adjustment of the worker to his job and increasing his efficiency. The first problem is to get the right men into the right job. There are estimates that one-third of all workers in the U. S. are vocationally maladjusted. This is a serious problem when you consider that $5,000 capital is invested for every worker."

The president, Dr. C. Harold Johnson, presided at the meeting with 62 members and guests in attendance. The speaker was introduced by the vice president, Mares Sherman. Clayton Jester, Biglerville star route and Jesse Haffington, Biglerville, were introduced as new members.

CONVALESCENT HOMES NEEDED IN COUNTY SAYS WELFARE UNIT

One of the greatest needs in the county is convalescent homes for the aged who are no longer able to properly care for themselves, members of the Adams County Welfare council pointed out Monday evening at a meeting in the Department of Public Assistance office on North Washington street.

Discussion of problems of the aged in the county showed that various resources are available to persons over 65 to aid them during the last years of their life. But facilities for caring for those who are not able to care for themselves are still not sufficient to take care of the need, some members pointed out.

All were agreed that care for the aged will increase in the future with advances in medical science permitting people to live longer.

Need Infirmary Here

Even during the last decade a number of changes in care for the aged have occurred. Clarence C. Smith, commissioners' clerk, pointed out. At the county home a decade ago, Smith said, there were very few bedfast persons. "Now our population to some extent is being reversed," Smith added. "The public assistance through its grants is taking care of indigent aged as long as they can take care of themselves, and many of the people who come to the county home are those who can no longer take care of themselves."

As a result of that change, "there has developed a great need for an infirmary at the county home. That became evident before the war and in 1941 the commissioners completed plans to construct an infirmary at the county home. However, the wartime restrictions prevented completion of the work," Smith reported.

Even though there are many things that could be done to make the Adams county home more attractive, one feature, individual rooms for inmates, is a valuable contribution to their health and welfare as compared to dormitory living which is utilized in some county homes, the welfare council was told by Miss Margaret Swiggard, field (Please Turn to Page 8)

Adams county's Red Cross Monday played "Good Samaritan" to six boys between the ages of 16 and 19 who started out Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock from their Philadelphia suburb homes for "a ride" and wound up with the car wrecked on Newman's hill.

The youths were driving toward Gettysburg when a tire blew out near the top of Newman's hill and the car turned over four times before it came to a halt. The young men then called police to report the accident and called a local garage to have the car towed in. They accompanied the vehicle to the garage here and then, being out of funds, headed for the Red Cross.

LEGION IN FAVOR OF COMPULSORY TRAINING PLAN

The Albert J. Lentz Post No. 202, American Legion, Gettysburg, is on record in favor of compulsory military training. Taking action on a letter from district headquarters, the Legion post at its regular meeting Monday night passed a motion favoring the draft, and directed its adjutant, Paul B. Fox, to notify Congressman Chester H. Gross of York of its action.

An appeal for cooperation in the membership drive was made by former Adjutant Harry D. Ridinger, recently appointed vice chairman of the state membership committee by Department Commander William L. Windsor. Ridinger's appointment was announced at Monday night's meeting in the Legion home Baltimore street, by District Deputy Commander Wilbur A. Geiselman.

The post voted $35 to the Halloween celebration committee for parade prizes, and authorized the appointment of a committee to consider a proposal to incorporate the post and report at the next meeting. Named by Commander Marvin W. Socia on this committee are Donald M. Swope, Edward A. Culp and Wilbur A. Geiselman.

Eighty-four members attended the meeting, at which the adjutant reported that the post membership is 1,294. Four new members were accepted: Maurice E. Bream, Gettysburg R. 1; Myron S. Myers, Highland avenue; Kenneth W. Stall-smith, Orttanna R. 2 and John A. Lawver, Biglerville.

CONTINUE STUDY ON PROBLEMS OF SCHOOL REPORT

The problem of the school report card—what it should tell and what it cannot attempt to tell—continued Monday night as a topic for the Adams County Schoolmen's association with the executive committee of the schoolmen meeting in the court house here in attempt to set up some recommendations for consideration by the entire group at its next meeting.

One main theme stood out in the recommendations made by the executive committee: that the report cards be simple and clear and be as personal as possible.

Urge Personal Note

On the matter of whether grades should be shown as figures or letters, the committee refused to enter argument. They held that any method would be all right so long as the method is explained to students and parents and so long as the passing grade was specific and understandable.

The committee recommended that the schools report the standing of pupils in relation to others in the class only if it is thought that will be of some help to the parents in guiding their children. Members of the executive group also held that the report should contain some personal comment with the teacher or school adding a line or two to the cards detailing what qualities in the pupils are lacking or what qualities should be commended. Personal comments written on the report cards, they held, should be encouraged because it best tells how a pupil is progressing.

In addition to the grades and personal remarks, the ideal report card should also include marks on cooperation, attitude, loyalty, industry, use of time, social relationships, responsibility and possibly thrift.

To Report November 19

A letter of explanation should be sent to the homes along with the first report cards of the year the educators agreed, and parents, in addition to getting detailed reports should be given an opportunity to go through the routine of the youngsters at school.

By giving mother and father a chance to actually go through a day's routine the parents will have a (Please Turn to Page Two)

Says Broadway 'Practically Dominated' By Communists

Washington, Oct. 21 (AP)—Movie critic John Charles Moffitt of Los Angeles told Congress members today that "Broadway is practically dominated" by Communists.

Moffitt followed Actor Adolphe Menjou to the witness chair in the investigation by the House committee on un-American activities of Communist influences in Hollywood. Menjou had testified that Hollywood is one of the main centers of Communist activity in America and said he had "heard" that John Howard Lawson, film writer, is head of the Communists there but cannot prove it.

Asked by Robert E. Stripling, chief committee investigator, for his opinion of the extent to which Communists influence the theater, Moffitt said: "The reading departments of publishing houses have been very heavily infiltrated by Communists. Broadway is practically dominated by them."

"Hollywood, I believe, is the only place where they have been strongly resisted."

Forty-four of 100 plays produced on Broadway between 1936 and the current season, Moffitt went on, "have contained material to further the Communist line and 32 others favored Communism."

Menjou, after naming Lawson, also testified he believes Herbert Sorrell, head of the Conference of Studio Unions, "is a Communist." With a wave of his hand, he said he would question the loyalty of

NEW REPORTS PLACE STRESS ON ATTITUDES

Increased emphasis in the Gettysburg public schools upon the development of good citizenship attitudes on the part of the pupils in the lower grades is reflected in the new style report booklets which were distributed for the first time last week, Dr. L. C. Keefe, superintendent, said today.

"The development of wholesome attitudes in the elementary grades is often just as important—and sometimes more so—than the grades the pupils get in their various study subjects," Dr. Keefe said. "We believe the new report forms will convey a better picture of the pupils' life in school."

He explained that the new report booklets, which replace the simpler term report cards used in recent years, place more emphasis on good citizenship attitudes.

Tighten Up On A's

The new report forms, which have been placed in use in the first six grades, also are considered an improvement in that they will depict changes in the caliber of classroom work from one term to the next in graph form.

An important change has been made in the grading system by making A's much harder to get. That grade in a subject is reserved for the "very outstanding pupils" with B a good grade for pupils that do work considerably above the average, the superintendent explained. C is considered average. D is below the "danger line" and F is failure.

The section of the report on citizenship attitudes is divided into two sections—objectives as individuals and objectives as group members.

Explains 'Thrill' Scoring

In the first category are: Dependableness in which absence, tardiness, and general dependability are scored; school attitude, promptness, effort, courtesy, self reliance, initiative, thrift, self control and good workmanship.

The second group includes: Good sportsmanship (complies with group decisions), school service (worthwhile contributions), and ability to take criticism profitably.

Pupils who excel on any of these scores receive a plus sign at the appropriate spot. Satisfactory or average ratings receive no mark but where improvement is needed the teacher marks a zero.

Dr. Keefe said he has specifically instructed the teachers that the subdivision on thrift is to take into account the manner in which the pupil takes care of his own and school property. The amount of money banked or invested in savings stamps or bonds is to be only a minor consideration in scoring, he explained.

HOLY NAME TO RALLY SUNDAY

On Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock there will be a grand Holy Name rally at Mt. St. Mary's college, two miles south of Emmitsburg. The purpose of the rally is to pay tribute to Christ under the title of His Kingship. The meeting of Holy Name men will be under the auspices of the Central Maryland section of the Holy Name societies of the Arch-diocese of Baltimore and Washington.

It has been the practice in recent years to have an annual rally of the different Holy Name societies of central Maryland on the campus of Mount St. Mary's college. This program, interrupted during the war years, will be carried out in the future, it is hoped, with fitting pomp and ceremony.

J. E. Baer, president of St. John's Holy Name society, Frederick, Md., will be the chairman of the 1947 demonstration. With his aides he arranged the program for the afternoon's ceremonies. Letters have been sent to all presidents of the central Maryland Holy Name societies, Transportation and other details (Please Turn to Page 7)

There were 189 awards in the entire nation.

Here And There News Collected At Random

The USS Constitution, familiarly known to millions of Americans by her famous sobriquet "Old Ironsides," observes her 150th anniversary of Naval service today. Public commemorative ceremonies were scheduled to be held on her deck at Boston.

In 1830, after 32 years of service, the battle-scarred frigate was considered too old and battered to be of further use, and the order was issued to destroy her.

However, the poetic skill of Oliver Wendell Holmes, a 21-year-old Harvard university graduate, and the sentimental will of the American public are credited with the extreme longevity of the titan of the old United States frigate fleet.

Holmes' poem, which aroused public sentiment, stayed the execution of this old ship. Holmes wrote:

Man Hurt, Driver Fined In Accident

William S. McFerren, 24, Waynesboro R. 4, suffered a wrist injury Monday morning about 10:20 o'clock when the car in which he was riding figured in a collision a mile and a half beyond Fairfield on the Zora road. State police from Gettysburg investigated.

George W. Fuller, 68, Collegeville, Pa., driver of the other car involved, was taken before Justice of the Peace H. L. Harbaugh, Fairfield, where he paid a fine of $10 and costs for failing to yield half the highway to oncoming traffic.

Police said Fuller was following another car toward Zora when the car ahead passed a parked machine and Fuller attempted to follow when his machine collided with a car coming in the opposite direction operated by Elmer Benedict, 39, Waynesboro, McFerren was a passenger in that car.

Damage to the Fuller machine was placed at about $200 while Benedict's damage was estimated at about $300.

DOES NOT WANT HUBBY TO VISIT TEST TUBE BABY

New York, Oct. 21 (AP)—Mrs. Julie Strnad, 31, has begun a legal battle to prevent her estranged husband from visiting her four-year-old daughter, Antoinette, who she claims is a "test tube baby," born as the result of artificial insemination, attorneys in the case disclosed yesterday.

The mother is seeking to amend a state supreme court separation decree, granted her October 8, which gives her husband, Antoine, a chauffeur, the right to visit the child on Sundays.

The daughter of the parties is a test tube baby, she said in a statement issued by her attorney Jerome Horwitz. "I submitted to artificial fertilization at the request of my husband, and he paid the physician," the husband's attorney, Philip Wolfson, said there "is no way of knowing that the mother conceived artificially, since the doctor could not be called as a witness," and added: "Biologically and physically, it is impossible for a child to have only one parent."

The doctor, Wolfson declared, "could only testify regarding such confidential services if the husband waived his rights, which he has no intention of doing."

Mrs. Strnad's motion for a rehearing on the decree was denied on technical grounds but her attorney said a new petition was being prepared.

PSES Office Offers Reemployment Help

Local offices of the Pennsylvania State Employment Service have been designated as the initial point of contact for veterans with re-employment claims under the provisions of the Selective Service act, according to an announcement today by Edgar A. Crouse, manager of the Gettysburg office.

Re-employment rights which entitle qualified veterans to reinstatement in their former positions were continued in effect following expiration of the Selective Service Act earlier this year, Mr. Crouse pointed out. With liquidation of the Selective Service system, responsibility for administering these provisions was transferred to the Veterans' Re-employment Rights Division in the U. S. Department of Labor. To serve veterans in Pennsylvania, the VRD has established offices in Philadelphia and Harrisburg, but information and assistance on any question connected with re-employment rights is available through any local office of the State Employment Service.

Veterans' re-employment commitments are also being named throughout the state to serve on a voluntary basis in negotiations with employers on problems of re-employment rights.

BRAZIL, RUSSIA CUT RELATIONS

Rio De Janeiro, Oct. 21 (AP)—Brazil, second largest country in the western hemisphere, announced today she had severed diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia.

The announcement sent diplomats speculating that Brazil might eventually extend the break to countries in the Soviet sphere of influence. They recalled Chile's recent break with Yugoslavia.

The break with Russia formalized a situation already virtually in effect. Brazil resumed relations with Russia in 1945 but there have been no commercial or cultural exchanges. Rio's ambassador to Moscow Mario Pimentel Brandao, has spent much of the time in Stockholm for reasons of health. Moscow's ambassador, Jacob Suritz, left Brazil following the official outlawing of the Communist party here several months ago.

Brazil took offense at Russian press attacks on this country and on President Eurico Gaspar Dutra. One of the Russian periodicals called Dutra an incompetent soldier and a fascist.

Vice President Nereu Ramos had declared the break was "imperative for national honor."

In Moscow yesterday, Pravda, anticipating the break, said that talk of the severance of relations showed "reactionaries" here had "lost all balance."

AT STATE DAR CONFERENCE

Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, Brookville, Ind., president general of the DAR, in an address Monday stressed the importance of a thorough knowledge of American history and discussed the interest of the national DAR in the selection of teachers to train the youth of the nation.

America must maintain an adequate national defense during the present world crisis, Mrs. O'Byrne also declared.

Mrs. Harlow Barton Kirkpatrick, Pittsburgh, opened the three-day 53rd session of the conference. Others besides Mrs. Bilheimer who participated in the program included Dr. John A. Fritchey II, of Harrisburg; Mrs. Thomas Henry Lee, Philadelphia; Mrs. Warren Ross Carlin, Warren; Mrs. Robert M. Leiberger, Connelville, and Mrs. M. Luther Mathiot, York.

DEGAULLE LEAD HOLDS IN FRANCE

Paris, Oct. 21 (AP)—Gen. Charles DeGaulle's new anti-Communist party, the Rally of the French People (RPF), held a steady lead over all other parties today as the count of votes in Sunday's municipal elections proceeded slowly.

Frenchmen, convinced that something would be changed as a result of the election, awaited a scheduled declaration from the general tomorrow for a possible hint as to how he intends to exploit his victory.

With 6,880,806 of an estimated 25,000,000 votes counted thus far, the standing was:

RPF—1,631,311 votes or 33.1 per cent; RPF-headed coalitions, 272,565 votes or 5.5 per cent; DeGaulle's—total 38.6 per cent.

Communist—1,442,941 votes, 29.3 per cent.

Socialists—703,035 votes, 14.3 per cent; Socialist-headed coalitions, 38,304 votes, 8 per cent; Socialist total—15.1 per cent.

Popular Republican Movement (MRP)—499,539 votes, 10.2 per cent.

Other parties—337,852 votes, 6.8 per cent.

Frenchmen are sure that the re-emergence of DeGaulle as one of the top political figures in France means some changes are going to be made. One change already was evident, and many Frenchmen attributed it to DeGaulle's victory. Parisians woke up to find their buses and subways running on schedule after having been strikebound for a week. The strike was settled last night.

SPOOK PRANKS REPORTED HERE

In the words of borough police, "It looks like the kids are starting to celebrate Halloween."

The thought was induced by reports of depredations in the west end of the borough Monday night. Mrs. James P. Cairns, 221 Springs avenue, reported to borough authorities that a trellis and wire fence had been torn down at her home. She estimated the damage at $25.

Hardly had this report been recorded and officers sent to investigate, when W. C. Spicer, Seminary avenue, reported five boys had been throwing stones on his porch and at his garage.

Police rounded up five boys on Springs avenue, and said that the five admitted throwing the stones, but denied having anything to do with the destruction at the Cairns home. The investigation is being continued.

After arrival at the Red Cross they were given dinner at a local restaurant, the first full meal they had had since leaving home almost 24 hours earlier. They had run out of gas and used the last of their money to buy gasoline.

Then they were removed by the Red Cross to the local hospital where Bentley was treated for bruises of the left wrist and a dime for bus transportation from Philadelphia to their homes and then checked with the parents when the youths arrived home.

An account was kept of the money advanced to the boys on a loan basis by the Red Cross. They will repay the money advanced here to see them through bruises of the left leg; dryer for their emergency.

MICHIGAN TOP TEAM IN POLL, IRISH SECOND

By JACK HAND
New York, Oct. 21 (AP)—Michigan has been stamped as the No. 1 team of the nation by the nation's sports-writers participating in the weekly Associated Press football poll as a result of its fourth straight lopsided victory.

After digesting Saturday's results that included a 49-21 Michigan romp over Northwestern, 147 of the 186 writers participating in the most extensive AP poll in history, voted first place to the Wolverines.

Michigan led last week but its margin was not as secure. Notre Dame remained a strong second choice on the basis of total points but drew only 21 firsts. On the basis of ten points for a first place vote, nine for second and so on, Michigan had 1790 points to 1553 for the Irish who downed Nebraska, 31-0.

Texas Third
As the two top teams never meet it is possible that their relative merits never will be determined. Michigan faces Minnesota this week while Notre Dame plays Iowa.

Ten writers thought Texas had the best ball club in the land and there were enough others who were impressed to give them their place in the standings with 1351 points. Texas downed Arkansas, 21-6, in preparation for a rugged struggle with Rice.

Pacific coast football, on the way back after a few slim years, was represented twice in the first ten. California, with one first place vote, was fourth after submerging Washington State, 21-6, and Southern California, their chief rival for the Rose Bowl spot, placed tenth on a 46-0 rout of Oregon State. California plays Southern Cal Saturday in the "big game" on the Pacific slope.

Illini Moves Up
Illinois was ranked fifth, moving up a peg on a 40-13 victory over Minnesota, and Army took over sixth place after its easy 40-0 game with VPI.

Georgia Tech's 27-7 decision over Auburn earned seventh place and the Engineers may do better next week as their unbeaten-untied team meets Citadel Saturday.

Pennsylvania, 34-14 winners over Columbia, may face a struggle to hold eighth place as the Quakers meet the revived Navy in one of the week's top eastern games.

Penn State continues to flatten all opposition, smothering Syracuse, 40-0, to send its season point total soaring to 196. The Nittany Lions face their first test this week in West Virginia, another perfect record powerhouse.

Waterfowl Season Opens; Ducks Scarce

Harrisburg, Oct. 21 (AP)—The annual waterfowl season opened in Pennsylvania at noon today with the state game commission warning hunters that "ducks are scarce."

In order to prevent too "extensive" a kill the game commission shortened the season by nearly three weeks, with Nov. 19 listed as the final day for shooting waterfowl, as compared to a Dec. 9 closing in 1946.

The bag limit was also reduced, with the daily limit fixed at 25 for coots, four for wild ducks except American and redbreasted mergansers, and one each day for wild geese and brant.

Shooting hours until Oct. 31 are from sunrise to one hour before sunset. On Nov. 1, the day the rabbit and squirrel season gets under way, the hours are from 9 a. m. to one hour before sunset, and between Nov. 2 and Nov. 19 the hours are from 7 a. m. to one hour before sunset.

Hurley And Fulks Open With Warriors

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 21 (AP)—Herb Hurley and sharpshooting Joe Fulks—former co-captains at Murray (Ky.) State Teachers' college, will be in the lineup of the Philadelphia Warriors in an exhibition basketball game with the Baltimore Bullets tonight at convention Hall.

This is Hurley's first season with the basketball association of America champions. Fulks, in his first season last year, set an all-time professional scoring record for a season by popping in 1,611 points.

Hurley, who stands 6-feet-2 inches and weighs 175 pounds, is said to be a better all-around floorman than Joe but not quite the point-getter.

Horton Smith May Head Pro Golfers

Detroit, Oct. 21 (AP)—Horton Smith, tall and blond veteran of the game of golf, sounded a potential bid today for the presidency of the Professional Golfers Association. Sgt. firststrtrNhp

Discussing the fact that his name has been mentioned in various PGA sections, the Detroit Golf Club Professional said in an interview:

"If there is any genuine, widespread desire on the part of the membership to consider me for the presidency, and I should be fortunate enough to be elected, I will accept and do my very best."

Smith's name has come up prominently as a candidate for the job which has been held by Ed Dudley of Augusta, Ga., for the last five years. The PGA will name its president at the annual meeting next month in Chicago.

ROOKIE PASSER IS DOING WELL

New York, Oct. 21 (AP)—Rookie Rocket Sam Vacanti of Chicago's winless entry in the All-America football conference is making a strong bid for payoff pitching honors in the junior professional major grid loop.

League figures today showed him ranking fourth among the forward passers on a basis of yards accounted for—but they also show that he had thrown 14 of 19 touchdown passes negotiated by his team.

He's completed 59 of 111 passes for 1,041 yards, with eight intercepted.

Vacanti's football career hasn't been with successful teams, but even last year, his final season with the University of Nebraska, he showed promise as a touchdown passer.

He completed 18 out of 61 and misdirected nine into interceptions, but five of his throws went for touchdowns. The rest of the Nebraska pitching staff cashed in on only one touchdown in 24 completions, albeit only two interceptions out of 50 passes.

This year the high scoring Rockets have still to win a game, but it isn't because the Chicagoans can't muster an offense. What they need is a defense.

Otto Graham, needle-threading forward passing ace for the Cleveland Browns, has displaced Wilson "Bud" Schwenk of the Baltimore Colts as the passing leader of the league.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP)—Navy's football team is riding on the crest of a one-game winning streak and you'd be surprised at the amount of enthusiasm it is generating in this sector. . . . The reason is that after last year's Army-Navy game everyone felt sure that Navy had the material for a fine team and they're hoping for another thriller at the end of this season. . . . Commander "Killer" Kane, assistant athletic director and Ensign Dick Duden, who scouts and coaches the plebes, sounded off at yesterday's football writers' chicken and conversation session to the effect that the Midshipmen had recovered confidence through that Cornell victory Saturday. "The California defeat set them back for a few weeks but they finally realized they can take over where we left off last year," Duden explained.

GROWING BOYS

Navy's big guns are Center Dick Scott and Dick Hawkins, the fullback whose departure from VMI created quite a ruckus. . . . Scott, a fine center both on offense and defense, also is the team's best clutch punter, although no one has figured a way to have him center the ball and then kick it. . . . Tackle Dick Shmshak and End Art Markel have developed fast and the second line, from which nothing much was expected, has come along very well. Of course there's nothing much wrong with Pistol Pete Williams, who is out with an ankle injury. . . . The schedule is no bargain, either, with Penn, Notre Dame, Georgia Tech, Penn State and Army still to come. And to make it tougher, Navy has played four games on as many different fields and will be on the road for two more before returning to Baltimore. . . . The Midshipmen really do things the hard way.

SHORTS AND SHELLS

The Philadelphia District PGA made Sonny Fraser, the clouting Atlantic City amateur golfer, an honorary member the other day. Sonny went out the same afternoon and shot a 68, two strokes better than any of the 25 Philly pros who competed in the one-day tourney.

TO CONSIDER CHANGES FOR TRACK MEETS

Harrisburg, Oct. 21 (AP)—When the Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic Association's board of control holds its annual meeting on November 1-3 one of the subjects up for consideration will be changes in the conduct of the annual track meet.

Edmund Wicht, executive secretary of the PIAA, said a track steering committee met here on Saturday and adopted several resolutions that must be approved or rejected by the board of control at its next meeting.

He said one recommendation called for the holding of class C track meets in those districts that have sufficient class C schools, with the district winners meeting in regional finals that will be held in the east and west.

Plan Shorter Race

It has been suggested that these regional meets be held the same day as the annual class A and class B meets at Penn State college, but Wicht said the sites and dates for these proposed meets would be announced by the board of control if the recommendation was approved.

Another change would call upon the PIAA to hold a special 180-yard low hurdle race in addition to the 200-yard low hurdles now on the schedules, the purpose being to study the results of the two races and determine which distance is best adapted for school-boy runners.

Don Mollenauer, of Mt. Lebanon high, asked that more representation be given to the schools in the larger districts at the annual track meet, but his plan was turned over to a special committee for further study and will not be acted upon in time to make any change in the conduct of the 1948 meet.

CHINA MEDICAL UNIT REPORTS

Philadelphia, Oct. 21 (AP)—The first official report in six months has been received from a Friends' service unit operating hospitals and laboratories in caves behind Communist lines in China, the American Friends' Service committee reports.

News of the group—out of contact with Friends' headquarters since last March—was brought out by a Canadian member of the medical team who traveled two months by horse, mule and donkey, the Friends' committee said.

According to the Canadian, the committee said yesterday, the medical team—consisting of two doctors, two nurses and two technicians—has been forced to move six or seven times since the evacuation last March of Yenian, where the group had been working with the International Peace hospital.

All members of the team are well, the committee said, although they sent word there is a great need for medical supplies. Patients are being cared for in caves, lying on straw-covered wooden platforms because of a lack of beds.

The medical team first went behind the Communist lines in December, 1946, taking with them 7,500 pounds of medical supplies and drugs. Two additional team members and 8,000 pound of supplies were flown into Yenian shortly before that city fell last March.

Quiz Friend In Nurse's Death

Lake George, N. Y., Oct. 21 (AP)—The Warren county grand jury probing the holiday death of 23-year-old Reva Reznick called her attractive hotel roommate to testify today for the second successive day.

Lorraine Grant, 23, like Miss Reznick a nurse at New York City's Mt. Sinai hospital, was questioned for three hours yesterday concerning her view of events that preceded discovery of her friend's bruised body in Lake George Aug. 1.

Miss Grant, who signed a waiver of immunity at the request of District Attorney J. Clarence Herlihy, told reporters after her first session with the grand jury: "From what I have learned about the case now, I don't think that Reva's death was a suicide. I think now that foul play was involved."

Miss Grant once indicated that she considered suicide a plausible explanation.

Wanted Guarantee Lawyer Would Win

Detroit, Oct. 21 (AP)—American court procedure proved a little puzzling yesterday to the oriental mind of Lung Poon, although he has spent 24 of his 63 years in this country.

Arraigned on a narcotics charge, he understood only with difficulty when his interpreter explained that Federal Judge Ernest A. O'Brien would appoint him an attorney free of charge. Assured there would be no fee, he then demanded assurance that the lawyer would win the case.

That was impossible, the court pointed out, so Lung Poon reconsidered his plea.

"Something for nothing is never so good," he stated, "I think I plead guilty and save time." Sentence was deferred.

Attendance Shows Gain In National

Philadelphia, Oct. 21 (AP)—Attendance in the National Football League is up eight per cent over 1946 figures, says Commissioner Bert Bell.

The record 200,000 fans which saw league games Sunday boosted paid attendance for the first 21 games to 674,438, as compared with 594,996 for the same number of games last year, the commissioner disclosed last night.

Prior to start of the season, Bell predicted more than 2,000,000 customers would see NFL games this year.

The 69,631 fans attracted at Los Angeles Sunday for the Los Angeles Rams-Chicago Cards game set a new all-time single game record.

New records also have been set in home games of the Washington Redskins (36,565) and the Chicago Cardinals (48,888).

ROCKETS LEAD TEACHER LOOP

Philadelphia, Oct. 21 (AP)—Bloomington and Shippensburg—each with a 3-1 record to date in Teachers' college gridiron competition—clash Saturday in a homecoming game at Bloomington that will eliminate one or the other from title contention.

The Rockets of Slippery Rock are leading the Teachers' college race with three wins and no losses but may be disqualified because they play no further conference games.

The West Chester Rams—who swept to their fifth straight 1947 win Saturday over Lock Haven 14-6—are in the same position. The Rams have only that one conference win as against no losses but play two other Teachers' college games this year.

Scored On Fumble

Other games this Saturday find Lock Haven meeting Indiana, Clarion facing California, and West Chester clashes with East Stroudsburg.

Slippery Rock took the league lead Saturday by handing Shippensburg its first defeat of the season 6-0, capitalizing on a fumble to turn it into the only score of the game.

In other games Saturday West Chester blanked a strong Cortland, N. Y., teachers team 21-0, Mansfield defeated Kutztown 40-6 and Bloomington trounced Millersville 37-0.

Road Gets Costly Coating Of Butter

Gurnee, Ill., Oct. 21 (AP)—A small stretch of Skokie highway north of here was given a slippery—and costly—coating of nearly 5,000 pounds of butter (worth about $3,500) yesterday.

The butter was in a truck driven by William Warneke of Kingston, Wis., and when the truck caught fire all except 200 pounds of the butter melted, ran along the highway, and into gutters. Warneke had the help of the Gurnee fire department but the butter was destroyed before the fire was extinguished.

Wholesale butter in Chicago was nearly 70 cents a pound.

Kiddies Wait For Their Lost Daddy

Oklahoma City, Oct. 21 (AP)—Farmer Earl Carter of Hominy, Okla., had his car break down in the suburbs of Oklahoma City late Sunday night. He went to look for an open garage—telling 11-year-old daughter, Caroline Sue, and seven-year-old son, Jesse Don, to wait in the car for him.

Then he couldn't find his automobile again. Yesterday afternoon, 20 hours later, police reunited the frantic father with his children.

They were playing beside the abandoned car, hungry, but still faithful to their instructions. "Daddy said to wait," said Caroline Sue.

Philanthropist Wills Estate To Charity

Seranton, Pa., Oct. 21 (AP)—C. S. Weston, Seranton banker and philanthropist who died here last Tuesday left the major portion of his estate of $1,000,000 and upwards to charity, his will disclosed.

The will, filed yesterday, revealed that Weston left $250,000 to nearby Keystone college and $200,000 for maintenance of Weston Field and Weston Park, recreation centers which Weston and his sister, Caroline Bird, gave to Seranton a number of years ago.

After certain other bequests one third of the residuary estate is to go to Wells college, Aurora, N. Y., and the remaining two thirds to Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N. Y., as a memorial to Weston, a member of the class of 1882.

William "Bill" Everhart, son of Curtis Everhart, Fairfield road, is enjoying enviable success during his first term as coach of the Howard, Pa., high school football team.

Everhart's heavy aggregation chalked up its fifth straight victory without defeat last Friday night by lacing the Lock Haven high school junior varsity, 19-0.

The Howard gridders have high hopes for an undefeated season. Three games remain on their schedule.

Another Gettysburgian is principal of the Howard schools. He is N. Jacob Weikert, son of Samuel Weikert, Steinwehr avenue.

412 HORSES IN NATIONAL SHOW AT HARRISBURG

Harrisburg, Oct. 21 (AP)—Outstanding show horses from all parts of the east, midwest and Canada were ready for competition here today at the opening of the Pennsylvania National Horse Show.

Harry W. Banzhoff, show secretary, said 412 horses are entered in the five-day show being held at the state farm show arena under the sponsorship of the Harrisburg Kiwanis club.

Gov. James H. Duff, honorary chairman, will be guest of honor at formal opening ceremonies tonight which will feature a parade and an exhibition by the Pennsylvania state police.

Other events scheduled for today include a five-gaited stallion stake, roadster to bike class, hunting and jumping courses, hackney pony classes, and heavy-harness classes.

Women Competing

Banzhoff said 116 separate events are listed for the show, and that women are competing in nearly all of the important open divisions. Outstanding horses scheduled to appear at the show are Merry Wilson, owned by R. J. Cunningham, of Pittsburgh, which Banzhoff said brought $26,000, the highest price ever paid for a walking horse; Wing Commander, holder of the world champion title for five-gaited stallion; Golden Hour, five-gaited stallion, and Glen Marie, undefeated four-year-old walking trot mare, both winners at last year's show, and Mrs. Jane Gordon Fletcher's five-gaited gelding, "The Invasion," which cost the Malvern society leader $23,000 at a St. Louis auction sale.

REMARKABLE COMEBACK

DeGaulle's bid for leadership is all the more remarkable because he had been in virtual retirement most of the time since he resigned the provisional presidency of France in January, 1946.

Should the complete vote show that DeGaulle's "Rally" represents the strongest party, we shall have the highly interesting situation of a new anti-Communist leadership against a Communist party which apparently hasn't been weakened at the polls. The question then will arise whether DeGaulle can command the support of the other anti-Communist elements.

DeGaulle's strength also is his weakness. He is a lone wolf—top man or nothing—and because of this characteristic has drawn the charge from some of his political foes that he is seeking to establish a dictatorship. However, the vote shows that a host of Frenchmen trust him—and certainly these are days when France needs the services of all her best men.

HONOR TRAINER

GET TOUGH WITH WATER

Altoona, Pa., Oct. 21 (AP)—More than a month of drought has toughened the sinews of the Altoona water department. Anybody found wasting water in the future, the city said today, not only will be fined but also will find his water service cut off for the rest of the emergency.

'NO PARKING' COSTLY

Meadville, Pa., Oct. 21 (AP)—The Meadville Chamber of Commerce said today that "inadequate parking facilities" had cost Meadville retail dealers $2,000,000 worth of business in the last year.

Asks Extension Of Pipelines System

Washington, Oct. 21 (AP)—The Federal Power commission has been asked by the Tennessee Gas Transmission company for permission to extend its pipeline system from West Virginia into New York state and New England.

The transmission firm also asked the Power commission yesterday to approve new compressor installations and feeder lines which the company said would nearly double its capacity.

The company said the proposed extension would run from Burnsville, Ky., northeast through Ohio, skirting the Pennsylvania mountain region, across the northwest tip of Pennsylvania and then into New York south of Buffalo and finally through the Mohawk valley to a terminus near Boston.

FRANCE TURNS TO LEADER OF 'FREE FRENCH'

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

The French municipal election results still remain a grab-bag out of which further surprises may be extracted, but nothing is expected to change the sensational political come-back staged by Gen. Charles DeGaulle through his call to the public to follow him in the new movement which he has designated "the Rally of the French People" to combat Communism and rehabilitate the stricken country.

The leader of the "Free French" during the dark days of the German occupation again is making a powerful bid for the generalship to lead them out of the wilderness. Naturally his votes haven't come from the Communist party, but rather from the Socialists, the Popular Republican movement and various other parties. Thus we have the extraordinary circumstance of DeGaulle commanding a large public following which represents a new group that has not yet appeared in the national Parliament.

From this it is clear that a considerable portion of the anti-Communist section of the public—and this represents the majority of the people—is seeking for additional leadership in France's life and death struggle. It isn't particularly surprising that they should call again on the man who during the bitter days of the war against Hitlerism became the symbol of French resistance.

DeGaulle's bid for leadership is all the more remarkable because he had been in virtual retirement most of the time since he resigned the provisional presidency of France in January, 1946.

Should the complete vote show that DeGaulle's "Rally" represents the strongest party, we shall have the highly interesting situation of a new anti-Communist leadership against a Communist party which apparently hasn't been weakened at the polls. The question then will arise whether DeGaulle can command the support of the other anti-Communist elements.

DeGaulle's strength also is his weakness. He is a lone wolf—top man or nothing—and because of this characteristic has drawn the charge from some of his political foes that he is seeking to establish a dictatorship. However, the vote shows that a host of Frenchmen trust him—and certainly these are days when France needs the services of all her best men.

The present geologic era is estimated to have extended over a time period of 50 million years.

VFW CALLS FOR SUBSIDY BY US FOR HOUSING

Harrisburg, Oct. 21 (AP)—The new housing committee of the Pennsylvania Veterans of Foreign Wars said today the monthly charges "on even the most modest home are too great for the average veteran."

Asserting that fixed charges "can be lowered only by reduction of building costs, by reduction of interest rates, or by subsidy or a combination of these three," the committee headed by George Van Orden, of New Hope, urged:

Ask Direct Subsidies

Direct federal subsidies "for home construction comparable to the subsidies paid through Veterans Administration for education."

Suspension for five years "of any labor union rules limiting labor output or preventing the use of new materials or methods of construction" and "the modification of building costs to permit the use of new materials and methods of construction."

"We believe," the committee continued, "that in a market where all interest rates, that in a market freed of all arbitrary controls and unfair practices where all efforts to solve the housing problem must stand or fall on their own merits, we will have lower costs and greater prosperity for all concerned."

Would Cut Red Tape

"In order to cut red tape and prevent delays, confusion and conflict of authority, we recommend that all federal controls over the building industry, deemed essential, be concentrated in a single agency."

"Improvements in the building industry must come from within the industry rather than from governmental control."

The committee also said "We unreservedly condemn the use of building materials for the construction of cheap unattractive houses on undesirable sites in the name of emergency housing, and the use

Today's Talk

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS
HOW TO LIVE A LIFE

Not very many of us learn the art of living. Too much of our life is wasted and diverted from the ways that lead to personal satisfaction and inward happiness. Too much stress is set upon material accumulations—so that when life should show its richest gains, the desire for spiritual wealth has all been dissipated.

A friend once told me of a man who had suddenly become wealthy in his later years. He built a big house—and, thinking that it should have a library, had a bookman buy sufficient books to fill the shelves of a big room. Then he engaged an art man to select expensive works of art to hang upon his walls. Then, when all was completed, he examined many of the books and walked about his house, looking at the examples of beauty, for which he had paid so dearly. Then he confessed that he had no understanding of any of these things. They were just furniture. They meant nothing to him—he had never developed the ability to love and appreciate them.

How poor, blank and dark is life without a love for the simple things that so enrich the mind and heart. I commend the reading of Thoreau's great classic "Walden," especially that chapter entitled "Where I Lived, and What I Lived For." Just before Thoreau died someone asked him if he had made his peace with God, and his answer was: "We have never quarreled!" And his own sister remarked that "he was the most upright man she had ever known."

It seems to me that the happiest possible life is that one that has been lived the most simply, and which has most spread its influence. All about us are beauty and wonder. This beautiful October—every October—is a thing of wonder, a natural miracle. Its coloring matches in its gradual change, tinting the very atmosphere with its rainbow reflections, and its peacefulness are things to enrich the soul. How the air is saturated with its fragrance, and how each falling leaf stirs the emotions as it gently leaves its tree nest to enrich the earth below for another Springtime.

And, in the words of Michael Fairless: "After all, what do we ask of life, here or indeed hereafter, but leave to serve, to live, to commune with our fellowmen and with ourselves; and from the lap of earth to look up into the face of God?"

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "Education by Example"

FROST

Frost, the killer, struck last night!
Black the dahlias stand;
All things lovely, red and white,
Fell beneath his hand.

Blind to everything that grows
Killer Frost must be.
If for mercy begged a rose,
Dead to it was he.

Had he pity? It is plain
None he chose to spare.
Leaving in his ghastly train
Dead things everywhere.

All need faith when Frost arrives,
Ending summer's reign,
To believe the rose survives—
Soon to bloom again.

DUFF FAVORS ADVERTISING SCENIC POINTS

Governor James H. Duff has an answer for persons who assert that the Pennsylvania Turnpike is taking tourists away from historical points of interest along other main highways in the state, notably Pennsylvania's "Main Street," the Lincoln Highway.

"Forty-six per cent of the motorists using the turnpike are tourists," the governor told a reporter for The Gettysburg Times recently during a visit by the governor to Caledonia State Park.

"These tourists would leave the super highway at various outlets along its length to visit points of historical interest, if the many places, such as Caledonia and Gettysburg, were sufficiently well advertised," he said.

Favors Advertising

The governor said that an opportunity is at hand to conduct an extensive educational and advertising campaign to let not only tourists, but many residents of the state, know about its state parks and playgrounds, its picnic areas, and its national and state shrines.

He said it was "amazing" how many people in the state did not know of Caledonia, one of the better-known parks in the state.

Governor Duff, with other state executives from eastern states, recently toured the west and was shown many of this section's outstanding points of interest.

"Most of these are located 50 or 60 miles from main highways or railroads," he said. "When they can provide bus lines to take tourists to these points of interest, and advertise their scenic wonders as they do, is there any reason why Pennsylvania cannot draw tourists from the turnpike to visit this state's many outstanding attractions, by means of good education and advertising?" he asked.

NEW POULTRY PLAN IS READY

Washington, Oct. 21 (AP)—Poultry and feed men came forward today with their second plan to eliminate poultryless Thursdays from the food campaign.

After working late into the night, industry spokesmen announced they were ready to bring the citizens food committee a specific new proposal to save grain for Europe by taking it away from chickens.

"We think we've got something acceptable," said an official of the National Poultry Producers Federation, whose first suggestion was rejected last night by Charles Luckman, food committee chairman.

The federation, working in cooperation with the commercial feed industry, said the new plan would be in shape for Luckman to take to a meeting of President Truman's cabinet food committee this morning.

In the afternoon the poultry and feed industry men planned to meet again with Luckman, who last night declared his readiness to restore chicken and turkey to Thursday menus if an adequate substitute means of conservation were offered.

"We will entertain any specific program to conserve grain at the source, rather than at the consumer end," the chairman told newsmen after a five-hour conference with industry spokesmen broke up in a stalemate.

Invents Chemical Lure For Finny Tribe

Pittsburgh, Oct. 21 (AP)—The fish didn't bite that day so Stanley J. Mikino, a Westinghouse Electric Corp. engineer, went into his laboratory and turned out a new kind of fish lure—which he says makes 'em snap at the hook like mad.

It's a minnow-like magnesium device, which glisters in the water and contains a capsule of sodium bicarbonate and a harmless citric acid. The two chemicals react with the water to produce a string of bubbles which fish love, says Mikino.

EDUCATION AT HARVARD GETS ANOTHER SHIFT

By JAMES MARLOW

Boston, Oct. 21 (AP)—Harvard college is experimenting in educating young men.

Since Harvard was founded 309 years ago it might seem that by this time it would know pretty well how to educate.

But this story deals only with Harvard college, not with Harvard university.

Harvard college is a four-year course for men looking for a bachelor of arts degree before going on to the university schools for graduates.

Until 1869 Harvard college undergraduates weren't able to do much choosing about what they'd study in college. The courses were pretty rigidly fixed. They all had to take courses like these:

Greek, Latin, Hebrew, logic, some mathematics, a little science.

In 1869 Charles W. Eliot became president—he remained in office until 1909—and made a big change.

He changed the tight, restricted course of learning and left it pretty much up to the students themselves to choose what they wanted to learn.

The Eliot system—called the elective system—was changed a bit when A. Lawrence Lowell became president in 1909. He was on the job until 1933. Lowell put in another system.

This became known as the concentration system—other schools call it majoring—and it means this:

A student should not be able to get out of Harvard college without knowing one field well. So each student had to pick a field of knowledge in which to specialize or concentrate.

If a man chose economics for concentration, he had to take at least six courses in that field. Then he was free to take three courses in any other field at all.

So the problem became this: How can a man specialize in one field and still, through his other studies, get a broad knowledge? What was needed, according to the professors, was something along these lines:

A "general education" which would include "the cultivation of a sense of values, the development of clear thinking, and an understanding of the physical and social world in which we live."

Tries New Answer

Last year—other colleges find it years ago—Harvard tried to find the answer by this method:

Let a man concentrate in one special field but at the same time let him study things fairly general such as:

1. The humanities—studies of things like Homer's Iliad, the Old Testament, Plato—to give him a view of the ideas which helped shape

69 SURVIVORS OF SKY QUEEN OFF TO HOMES

Boston, Oct. 21 (AP) — Back again on the land they never expected to reach, 69 survivors of the ill-fated Bermuda Sky Queen headed for their homes today as the Civil Aeronautics board prepared an all-out investigation of the near-disaster in the mountainous north Atlantic.

The Coast Guard cutter Bibb, which wrote maritime history in effecting the rescue of every man, woman and child on the plane which was ditched 800 miles off Newfoundland last Tuesday because of a gasoline shortage, brought the Sky Queen's erstwhile passengers to Boston yesterday.

The 1,600 mile run from "Station Charlie," the Coast Guard code for its weather station where the flying boat came down, ended in one of the widest demonstrations since the first troopship came home from the recent war.

One and all, the survivors, many clad in dungarees, shouted their praises of the crew of the Bibb. Too, they couldn't say enough about the airmanship of Captain Charles Martin of Miami, Fla., pilot of the Sky Queen. At the same time, however, some of the passengers charged the seaplane had been "overloaded."

William Bostock, Shell Oil company employee, a survivor, said a declaration was signed by all but three of the plane's adult passengers, asking "why planes of this type are allowed to fly."

Captain Martin, former navy officer, said he had a sufficient supply of reserve gasoline when he left Poole, England, for Baltimore, but that "the headwinds buffeted us and I decided we would not make the effort to go on to Gander, Newfoundland, and almost surely sacrifice the lives of all these people. So I set her down."

CAB officials announced a public hearing would open in New York Oct. 30 "to seek to determine the physical cause of the forced landing."

HOLD PAIR AFTER CRASHING PLANE

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 21 (AP) — Two sailors are being held by Delaware State police who said the pair—neither a trained pilot—had crash landed on the farm of U. S. Senator C. Douglas Buck (R-Del.) after an unauthorized flight from Annapolis in a Naval officer's private plane.

State police identified the two as Joseph Gionet, 19, and Robert Naylor, 23.

A Navy teletype message said the pair broke out of the brig Sunday on the USS Block Island, a decommissioned aircraft carrier, where they were awaiting court martial trials for being absent without leave.

State police said the two took off from Annapolis in the plane of Lt. Donald E. Walport, assigned to the Block Island, and finally were forced down on Senator Buck's farm, 10 miles south of Wilmington, when their gas supply ran out.

The plane was slightly damaged when it pancaked in the soft earth and nose over. Gionet and Naylor were seized three hours later while attempting to obtain an automobile ride along a highway at Edge Moor, Del., police said.

Police said Gionet apparently piloted the plane from Annapolis. Although not a trained flier, he had learned how to operate the controls by watching navy pilots at the Naval Academy, police said.

Nephew Is Held In Shotgun Slaying

Clearfield, Pa., Oct. 21 (AP)—State Policeman James Stuck said a nephew of George B. Tooney, 47, of Clearfield, was being questioned Monday in the shotgun death of Tooney during a week-end argument. Stuck said the nephew, Donald Tooney, 20, was held on a charge of assault and battery with intent to kill.

Wounded at the nephew's home Friday night, Tooney died in Phillipsburg hospital Sunday.

Stuck gave this version of the shooting: George Tooney threw a bottle at his nephew during an argument. Picking up a poker, the nephew chased his uncle from the house, then got a shotgun and fired several shots. Young Tooney said he meant to fire into the air, but one blast struck his uncle in the groin.

White for a Shroud

By DON CAMERON

Chapter 10

A sudden urge for the soothing qualities of tobacco sent Brant from the Reporter office to the Northland Hotel for his forgotten pipe and pouch shortly after Sheriff Worth's visit. It was then that he heard the faint sound through the wall that separated his room from Ralston Crane's—a stealthy shuffle followed by the complaining creak of a floor board.

Brant went to the hall as quietly as he could and stood outside Crane's door. Through the pine panels the rustling of papers came distinctly. Someone—Crane or another person—was in that room.

He turned the door knob slowly, cautiously. The door was unlocked; it moved inward without resistance. Bracing himself, Brant flung it wide and thrust his body into the opening. A man standing at the dresser with his back to the door whirled, choking back an exclamation. One of the dresser drawers was open; the man's elbow hit against the corner as his right hand jerked in the direction of his hip pocket.

"Ow!" cried Peter Rigby, recognizing Brant. He checked the sweep of his hand. His colorless eyes were mortified. "What's the idea? What business have you got here?"

Brant stood against the edge of the door frame, his jaw tight. He said, "That's one of the questions the sheriff will want to ask you. We have a law in these parts to take care of people who break into other people's rooms."

"You don't need to tell me about the law," Rigby's smile tried to be ingratiating and defiant at once. "I'm law myself, see?" He pulled back the lapel of his coat to show a yellow metal badge.

Entering the room, Brant inspected the shield with interest. It was of bronze and was stamped with the words, "SPECIAL DEPUTY SHERIFF, WYNE COUNTY, MICHIGAN."

"When I was a reporter in Detroit I had half a dozen of those," he snorted.

"I was sworn in as an officer of the law," began Rigby blustering. "Even if you were the sheriff's right-hand man in Wayne county," Brant broke in, "you're three hundred miles out of bounds right now. This is Red Rock county and the sheriff here is Ed Worth. He won't like your taking liberties in his territory. I wouldn't be surprised if he locked you up, and if Judge Thorpe gave you 90 days."

"Don't do that. I came up here on legitimate business—legal business. If I get in trouble it'll ruin everything."

Brant had no intention of causing Rigby's arrest. To do so, he reasoned, would heighten interest in the disappearance of Crane and create a wave of curiosity and perhaps an official investigation that would embarrass Mac and increase Ella's fears.

He suggested, "Maybe we can strike a bargain."

"I haven't got any money—" "No one's talking about money. You say you're after information. So am I. Tell me why you want to see Crane and I'll forget I found you in this room."

The other flinched. "It's a personal matter."

"I don't intend to print it."

"Just the same it isn't anything I can tell."

"Is Crane in a jam, criminal or financial?"

Rigby said with a kind of hopeless desperation, "I'm not saying, I would, but I can't, and that's on the up and up. If you're not satisfied, call your sheriff—only I'm warning you I'll make trouble for a lot of people besides me. I wouldn't go to jail for being here, either, when the truth came out."

Brant recalled the voluntary movement of Rigby's hand toward his hip. "What if you went to jail for carrying a concealed weapon?" "I got a permit."

In the open drawer beside Rigby lay a sheaf of letters and papers bound by a wide rubber band. That undoubtedly, was what Rigby had been after. It occurred to Brant that the bundle might explain the mystery of Crane's presence in Red Rock and his hold, if any, over John and Ella Macfarlane.

He would have given much to examine it.

"Outside, Rigby," he said. "I'm not a cop and I'm not going to turn you in, but I don't like extra-legal activities next door to me. If you want to search this room tell your troubles to Ed Worth. If he sympathizes he'll get a search warrant."

Sulkily Rigby obeyed, pausing in the doorway to make sure that Brant closed the drawer without removing any of its contents. Then, when Brant had shut the door, the pudgy one went downstairs without a word.

Before going back to his office, Brant shook Eric Nordquist awake. He told the grumbling old hotel man, "I want you to seal up Crane's room. I heard somebody prowling there a few minutes ago, but I think I scared him before he got anything."

Nordquist blinked stupidly. "Who was prowling?"

Brant skipped the question. "I got a padlock, hasp and stable with you lock the door so it will stay locked?"

"I got them things, Andy. I'll put them on right away. Do you think it was this fellow Rigby?"

"It might have been. Take care of the padlock keys."

"Nobody'll steal 'em from me. You reckon Crane's got valuables there?" "Whatever he has must be valuable to someone."

"What do you think happened to Crane?"

Striding toward the door Brant said, "How the devil should I know?" "I bet he's dead," Nordquist called after him. "I bet somebody he treated dirty caught up with him in the storm. I bet—"

Brant slammed the door.

Chapter 11

Half an hour after Brant had returned to his inept type-setting, men and machines began the arduous task of clearing the streets of Red Rock. Out from the county garage roared the big rotary snowplow, trade-named Snogo, to form the mechanized spearhead of a column of lesser plows and a small army of men with shovels.

The rotary crawled on caterpillar treads, thrusting ahead of itself vertical knives that cut an eight-foot slice out of the solid white. Behind the knives whirled steel scoops that chewed the packed stuff into manageable chunks and hurled them upward, and outward, so that a fat stream of snow arched constantly at the right of the contraption, piling over sidewalks and against building fronts.

Starting at the west end of Superior street, the Snogo clanked and clattered, advancing with ponderous difficulty, finding every inch of the way a battle. Behind it lay a lengthening corridor with straight glittering walls that might have been heven from alabaster.

The racket of the labored procession penetrated to the printing shop and brought Brant and Quarfield to the front door. Carol was already outside, watching with shining eyes. Brant put his hand on her shoulder. "You can go home tonight, Scoop."

She pouted. "What if I don't want to? What if I'd rather stay close to you, where I'll feel safe?"

He looked at her keenly. "If a hard-working newspaper gal like you doesn't get enough of a slave-driving boss like me in the course of 8 or 10 hours, she must be crazy."

She laughed. "I'm crazy, Andy. Everyone else has known it for years, and it's high time you found it out."

"All women are nuts," Quarfield stated glumly.

"What about Lola?" Carol asked. "She's nuts, too. Worse than that she's driving me nuts."

"If you weren't batty to start with," Andy put in, "you wouldn't give a woman a chance to bother you. I swore off them when I was a kid."

"On yeah?" Quarfield's grin was suggestive. "How about—?"

The rotary plow gave a sudden lunge forward and its motors made a deafening clatter, drowning out the printer's words. Brant wondered vaguely what the other had been going to say, doubting whether he would have had the nerve to mention Ella Macfarlane.

A twinge of something like pain went through him when he thought of her.

They had returned to the office and had most of the news that would go into the paper already in type, when the biggest story of all broke without warning.

First came the sudden silence. Brant had not realized how completely the distant clatter of the rotary plow dominated other sound until it ceased. For a second, he heard plainly the ticking of Carol's typewriter in the front office, then that too stopped, and it seemed the world was utterly still.

Quarfield spoke first. "She went bust," he said.

But Brant was listening by that time to the shouting outside—the faint hail from the direction of the mill, the querulous answering cries and down the street. It went on for seconds before his ears distinguished two chilling words:

"Dead man!"

He said, "They've uncovered something!" and sprinted for the door, snatching his cap and coat in passing.

The steel juggernaut had halted in front of the mill. A few men had already gathered around it and others were hastening toward it, pouring out from stores and saloons.

Ed Worth was on his way there, his short legs carrying him at a pace just less than a run; he cupped his mittened hands about his mouth and bellowed, "Don't none of you fellows touch nothing!"

Brant started walking swiftly toward the center of interest, feeling a dread so intense that he was hardly conscious of Carol clinging to his arm. He took it for granted from the beginning that this was one more manifestation of the evil that had been loosed with the coming of the storm.

He shouldered his way through the knot of men at the front of the snowplow and stood by Worth, gazing at the curious object projecting from the dubious snow ahead of the rotary scoops. It took him half a minute to realize that it was the stump of a man's leg, broken off below the knee, with a tatter of cloth fluttering around it and a jagged piece of bone jutting from hard red flesh.

There was sickness in the unshaven face and in the hoarse voice of young Merton Case who had operated the plow. He said, "I was backing out for a fresh start when I see a black thing kicked out with the snow. I didn't know what it was. I hit that tree and stuck there."

Case kept watching the ground but all the others lifted their face toward the ancient elm that spread its snow-covered branches at the corner of Mill Avenue. In the main crotch of the tree, plainly visible, was a black rubber-soled boot with three or four inches of a man's naked leg protruding from its top.

The sheriff grunted. "Give me a hand, will you, Andy?"

They pulled together, and the corpse slid out of its sheath—a featureless figure crusted with white—and dropped into the soft snow at their feet.

It was Charlie King.

Quarfield seemed less concerned than anyone else there. He volunteered, "It was a bad night, for drunks to go stumbling around. Charlie found it out too late."

Something more deliberate than a combination of storm and liquor had overcome the mill worker, however. There were raw streaks in his face where claws or fingernails had ripped the skin. His eyes were open and bulging, his swollen tongue was visible between gasping lips, and his cheeks were a mottled blue.

The sheriff mumbled one word: "Murder."

For an instant his blue eyes, no longer mild, met Brant's. Then he turned and looked for a long time at the stone office building of the paper mill.

It is estimated that it required from one to two and a half million years to build up the coal beds in Pennsylvania.

PRISON TRAIN REACHES CAMP

Santa Maria, Calif., Oct. 21 (AP)—Passengers of the army's transcontinental prison train "hell run" were lodged Monday in quarters from which escape would be "extremely difficult."

The 141 tough army prisoners, transported from Greenhaven, N. Y., to the disciplinary barracks at nearby Camp Cooke, made the trip a nightmare for their guards with unruliness, escapes and attempted escapes.

Seven escaped in Missouri, Kansas and Colorado. Six were recaptured, one being shot seriously. One man, James D. Anders, 21, of Jamestown, N. Y., made good his escape and is being hunted in Kansas. Scores of attempts to escape from the train were made, every time it slowed down, officers said. Several were shot and wounded by guards.

But Col. Wade D. Killen of Salt Lake City, train commander from there westward, said the trip was without serious incident from Salt Lake City here after the guard was increased to 52 officers and men.

The train fairly bristled with 45 pistols, sub-machine guns and carbines as it passed through Las Vegas, Nev., San Bernardino, Calif., and the outer rail yards of Los Angeles, arriving at Camp Cooke yesterday.

Col. Killen described the men as "habitual criminals, many of them injured to crime before they entered the army." All have been sentenced for serious crimes, many to life sentences. The colonel said escape here would be "extremely difficult; as much so as from any first class state prison."

32 GI BODIES ARRIVE IN EAST

Philadelphia, Oct. 21 (AP) — The bodies of 32 GIs killed in the Pacific war have arrived in Philadelphia.

The caskets, each protected by a shipping case, were brought by train from California and taken on Sunday to a railroad siding at the Philadelphia Quartermaster depot.

Eventually, 300 of the approximately 3,000 bodies brought back from the Pacific on the transport ship Knott, which arrived in San Francisco Oct. 10, will be shipped here for distribution in eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland.

Unloading will begin today. This completed, each shipping case will be opened for a final inspection of the casket it contains.

Any damage or faulty sealing will be repaired before the next step—the carrying out of family instructions—is taken.

Once inspected and certified, the remains will be distributed in accordance with wishes of the next of kin.

Roswell, N. M., Oct. 21 (AP) — Bob Crosby, who cheated death a thousand times on bucking broncos and wild-eyed steers, is dead from a jeep accident. He died of head and chest injuries near here yesterday when his jeep plunged 30 feet into the dry river bed of the Pecos River. The 50-year-old Crosby has been "King of the Cowboys" to rodeo fans for a quarter of a century.

Long has it waved on high, And many an eye has danced to see.

That banner in the sky; Beneath it rung the battle shout, And burst the cannon's roar;

The meteor of the ocean air Shall sweep the clouds no more.

Her deck, once red with heroes' blood,

Where knelt the vanquished foe,

When winds were scurrying o'er the flood,

And waves were white below, No more shall feel the victor's tread

Or know the conquered knee; The harpies of the shore shall pluck

Today's Talk

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS
HOW TO LIVE A LIFE

Not very many of us learn the art of living. Too much of our life is wasted and diverted from the ways that lead to personal satisfaction and inward happiness. Too much stress is set upon material accumulations—so that when life should show its richest gains, the desire for spiritual wealth has all been dissipated.

A friend once told me of a man who had suddenly become wealthy in his later years. He built a big house—and, thinking that it should have a library, had a bookman buy sufficient books to fill the shelves of a big room. Then he engaged an art man to select expensive works of art to hang upon his walls. Then, when all was completed, he examined many of the books and walked about his house, looking at the examples of beauty, for which he had paid so dearly. Then he confessed that he had no understanding of any of these things. They were just furniture. They meant nothing to him—he had never developed the ability to love and appreciate them.

How poor, blank and dark is life without a love for the simple things that so enrich the mind and heart. I commend the reading of Thoreau's great classic "Walden," especially that chapter entitled "Where I Lived, and What I Lived For." Just before Thoreau died someone asked him if he had made his peace with God, and his answer was: "We have never quarreled!" And his own sister remarked that "he was the most upright man she had ever known."

It seems to me that the happiest possible life is that one that has been lived the most simply, and which has most spread its influence.

All about us are beauty and wonder. This beautiful October—every October—is a thing of wonder, a natural miracle. Its coloring matches in its gradual change, tinting the very atmosphere with its rainbow reflections, and its peacefulness are things to enrich the soul. How the air is saturated with its fragrance, and how each falling leaf stirs the emotions as it gently leaves its tree nest to enrich the earth below for another Springtime.

And, in the words of Michael Fairless: "After all, what do we ask of life, here or indeed hereafter, but leave to serve, to live, to commune with our fellowmen and with ourselves; and from the lap of earth to look up into the face of God?"

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "Education by Example"

The Poet of the People
By EDGAR A. GUEST

FROST
Frost, the killer, struck last night!
Black the dahlias stand,
All things lovely, red and white,
Fell beneath his hand.

Blind to everything that grows
Killer Frost must be,
If for mercy begged a rose,
Dead to it was he.

Had he pity? It is plain
None he chose to spare,
Leaving in his ghastly train
Dead things everywhere.

All need faith when Frost arrives,
Ending summer's reign,
To believe the rose survives—
Soon to bloom again.

DUFF FAVORS ADVERTISING SCENIC POINTS

Governor James H. Duff has an answer for persons who assert that the Pennsylvania Turnpike is taking tourists away from historical points of interest along other main highways in the state, notably Pennsylvania's "Main Street," the Lincoln Highway.

"Forty-six per cent of the motorists using the turnpike are tourists," the governor told a reporter for The Gettysburg Times recently during a visit by the governor to Caledonia State Park.

"These tourists would leave the super highway at various outlets along its length to visit points of historical interest, if the many places, such as Caledonia and Gettysburg, were sufficiently well advertised," he said.

Favors Advertising

The governor said that an opportunity is at hand to conduct an extensive educational and advertising campaign to let not only tourists, but many residents of the state, know about its state parks and playgrounds, its picnic areas, and its national and state shrines.

He said it was "amazing" how many people in the state did not know of Caledonia, one of the better-known parks in the state.

Governor Duff, with other state executives from eastern states, recently toured the west and was shown many of this section's outstanding points of interest.

"Most of these are located 50 or 60 miles from main highways or railroads," he said. "When they can provide bus lines to take tourists to these points of interest, and advertise their scenic wonders as they do, is there any reason why Pennsylvania cannot draw tourists from the turnpike to visit this state's many outstanding attractions, by means of good education and advertising?" he asked.

NEW POULTRY PLAN IS READY

Washington, Oct. 21 (AP)—Poultry and feed men came forward today with their second plan to eliminate poultryless Thursdays from the food campaign.

After working late into the night, industry spokesmen announced they were ready to bring the citizens food committee a specific new proposal to save grain for Europe by taking it away from chickens.

"We think we've got something acceptable," said an official of the National Poultry Producers Federation, whose first suggestion was rejected last night by Charles Luckman, food committee chairman.

The federation, working in cooperation with the commercial feed industry, said the new plan would be in shape for Luckman to take into a meeting of President Truman's cabinet food committee this morning.

In the afternoon the poultry and feed industry men planned to meet again with Luckman, who last night declared his readiness to restore chicken and turkey to Thursday menus if an adequate substitute means of conservation were offered.

"We will entertain any specific program to conserve grain at the source, rather than at the consumer end," the chairman told newsmen after a five-hour conference with industry spokesmen broke up in a stalemate.

EDUCATION AT HARVARD GETS ANOTHER SHIFT

By JAMES MARLOW

Boston, Oct. 21 (AP)—Harvard college is experimenting in educating young men.

Since Harvard was founded 309 years ago it might seem that by this time it would know pretty well how to educate.

But this story deals only with Harvard college, not with Harvard university.

Harvard college is a four-year course for men looking for a bachelor of arts degree before going on to the university schools for graduates.

Until 1869 Harvard college undergraduates weren't able to do much choosing about what they'd study in college. The courses were pretty rigidly fixed. They all had to take courses like these:

Greek, Latin, Hebrew, logic, some mathematics, a little science.

In 1869 Charles W. Eliot became president—he remained in office until 1909—and made a big change.

He changed the tight, restricted course of learning and left it pretty much up to the students themselves to choose what they wanted to learn.

The Eliot system—called the elective system—was changed a bit when A. Lawrence Lowell became president in 1909. He was on the job until 1933. Lowell put in another system.

This became known as the concentration system—other schools call it majoring—and it means this:

A student should not be able to get out of Harvard college without knowing one field well. So each student had to pick a field of knowledge in which to specialize or concentrate.

If a man chose economics for concentration, he had to take at least six courses in that field. Then he was free to take three courses in any other field at all.

So the problem became this: How can a man specialize in one field and still, through his other studies, get a broad knowledge? What was needed, according to the professors, was something along these lines:

A "general education" which would include "the cultivation of a sense of values, the development of clear thinking, and an understanding of the physical and social world in which we live."

Tries New Answer

Last year—other colleges started it years ago—Harvard tried to find the answer by this method:

Let a man concentrate in one special field but at the same time let him study things fairly general such as:

1. The humanities—studies of things like Homer's Iliad, the Old Testament, Plato—to give him a view of the ideas which helped shape

69 SURVIVORS OF SKY QUEEN OFF TO HOMES

Boston, Oct. 21 (AP) — Back again on the land they never expected to reach, 69 survivors of the ill-fated Bermuda Sky Queen headed for their homes today as the Civil Aeronautics board prepared an all-out investigation of the near-disaster in the mountainous north Atlantic.

The Coast Guard cutter Bibb, which wrote maritime history in effecting the rescue of every man, woman and child on the plane which was ditched 800 miles off Newfoundland last Tuesday because of a gasoline shortage, brought the Sky Queen's erstwhile passengers to Boston yesterday.

The 1,600 mile run from "Station Charlie," the Coast Guard code for its weather station where the flying boat came down, ended in one of the wildest demonstrations since the first troopship came home from the recent war.

One and all, the survivors, many clad in dungarees, shouted their praises of the crew of the Bibb. Too, they couldn't say enough about the airmanship of Captain Charles Martin of Miami, Fla., pilot of the Sky Queen. At the same time, however, some of the passengers charged the seaplane had been "overloaded."

William Bostock, Shell Oil company employee, a survivor, said a declaration was signed by all but three of the plane's adult passengers, asking "why planes of this type are allowed to fly."

Captain Martin, former navy officer, said he had a sufficient supply of reserve gasoline when he left Poole, England, for Baltimore, but that "the headwinds buffeted us and I decided we would not make the effort to go on to Gander, Newfoundland, and almost surely sacrifice the lives of all these people. So I set her down."

CAB officials announced a public hearing would open in New York Oct. 30 "to seek to determine the physical cause of the forced landing."

HOLD PAIR AFTER CRASHING PLANE

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 21 (AP) — Two sailors are being held by Delaware State police who said the pair — neither a trained pilot — had crashed landed on the farm of U. S. Senator C. Douglas Buck (R-Del.) after an unauthorized flight from Annapolis in a Naval officer's private plane.

State police identified the two as Joseph Gionet, 19, and Robert Naylor, 23.

A Navy teletype message said the pair broke out of the brig Sunday on the USS Block Island, a decommissioned aircraft carrier, where they were awaiting court martial trials for being absent without leave.

State police said the two took off from Annapolis in the plane of Lt. Donald E. Walport, assigned to the Block Island, and finally were forced down on Senator Buck's farm, 10 miles south of Wilmington, when their gas supply ran out.

The plane was slightly damaged when it pancaked in the soft earth and nose over. Gionet and Naylor were seized three hours later while attempting to obtain an automobile ride along a highway at Edge Moor, Del., police said.

Nephew Is Held In Shotgun Slaying

Clearfield, Pa., Oct. 21 (AP) — State policeman James Stuck said a nephew of George B. Tooney, 47, of Clearfield, was being questioned Monday in the shotgun death of Tooney during a week-end argument. Stuck said the nephew, Donald Tooney, 20, was held on a charge of assault and battery with intent to kill.

Wounded at the nephew's home Friday night, Tooney died in Phillipsburg hospital Sunday.

Stuck gave this version of the shooting: George Tooney threw a bottle at his nephew during an argument. Picking up a poker, the nephew chased his uncle from the house, then got a shotgun and fired several shots. Young Tooney said he meant to fire into the air, but one blast struck his uncle in the groin.

AGED DOCTOR DIES

White for a Shroud

By DON CAMERON

Chapter 10

A sudden urge for the soothing qualities of tobacco sent Brant from the Reporter office to the Northland Hotel for his forgotten pipe and pouch shortly after Sheriff Worth's visit. It was then that he heard the faint sound through the wall that separated his room from Ralston Crane's—a stealthy shuffle followed by the complaining creak of a floor board.

Brant went to the hall as quietly as he could and stood outside Crane's door. Through the pine panels the rustling of papers came distinctly. Someone—Crane or another person—was in that room.

He turned the door knob slowly, cautiously. The door was unlocked; it moved inward without resistance. Bracing himself, Brant flung it wide and thrust his body into the opening. A man standing at the dresser with his back to the door whirled, choking back an exclamation. One of the dresser drawers was open; the man's elbow hit against the corner as his right hand jerked in the direction of his hip pocket.

"Ow!" cried Peter Rigby. Recognizing Brant, he checked the sweep of his hand. His colorless eyes were mortified. "What's the idea? What business have you got here?"

Brant stood against the edge of the door frame, his jaw tight. He said, "That's one of the questions the sheriff will want to ask you. We have a law in these parts to take care of people who break into other people's rooms."

"You don't need to tell me about the law," Rigby's smile tried to be ingratiating and defiant at once. "I'm law myself, see?" He pulled back the lapel of his coat to show a yellow metal badge.

Entering the room, Brant inspected the shield with interest. It was of bronze and was stamped with the words, "SPECIAL DEPUTY SHERIFF, WAYNE COUNTY, MICHIGAN."

"When I was a reporter in Detroit I had half a dozen of those," he snorted.

"I was sworn in as an officer of the law," began Rigby blustering. "Even if you were the sheriff's right-hand man in Wayne county," Brant broke in, "you're three hundred miles out of bounds right now. This is Red Rock county and the sheriff here is Ed Worth. He won't like your taking liberties in his territory. I wouldn't be surprised if he locked you up, and if Judge Thorpe gave you 90 days."

"Don't do that. I came up here on legitimate business—legal business. If I get in trouble it'll ruin everything."

Brant had no intention of causing Rigby's arrest. To do so, he reasoned, would heighten interest in the disappearance of Crane and create a wave of curiosity and perhaps an official investigation that would embarrass Mac and increase Ella's fears.

He suggested, "Maybe we can strike a bargain."

"I haven't got any money—" "No one's talking about money. You say you're after information. So am I. Tell me why you want to see Crane and I'll forget I found you in this room."

The other fidgeted. "It's a personal matter."

"I don't intend to print it."

"Just the same it isn't anything I can tell."

"Is Crane in a jam, criminal or financial?"

Rigby said with a kind of hopeless desperation, "I'm not saying. I would, but I can't, and that's on the up and up. If you're not satisfied, call your sheriff—only I'm warning you it'll make trouble for a lot of people besides me. I wouldn't go to jail for being here, either, when the truth came out."

Brant recalled the voluntary movement of Rigby's hand toward his hip. "What if you went to jail for carrying a concealed weapon?"

"I got a permit."

In the open drawer beside Rigby lay a sheaf of letters and papers bound by a wide rubber band. That undoubtedly, was what Rigby had been after. It occurred to Brant that the bundle might explain the mystery of Crane's presence in Red Rock and his hold, if any, over John and Ella Macfarlane.

He would have given much to examine it.

"Not a word, Rigby," he said. "I'm not a cop and I'm not going to turn you in, but I don't like extra-legal activities next door to me. If you want to search this room tell your troubles to Ed Worth. If he sympathizes he'll get a search warrant."

Sulkily Rigby obeyed, pausing in the doorway to make sure that Brant closed the drawer without removing any of its contents. Then, when Brant had shut the door, the pudgy one went downstairs without a word.

Before going back to his office, Brant shook Eric Nordquist awake. He told the grumbling old hotel man, "I want you to seal up Crane's room. I heard somebody prowling there a few minutes ago, but I think I scared him before he got anything."

Nordquist blinked stupidly. "Who was prowling?"

Brant skipped the question. "I get a padlock, hasp and staple will you lock the door so it will stay locked?"

"I got them things, Andy. I'll put them on right away. Do you think it was this fellow Rigby?"

"It might have been. Take care of the padlock keys."

"Nobody'll steal 'em from me. You reckon Crane's got valuables there?" "Whatever he has must be valuable to someone."

"What do you think happened to Crane?"

Striding toward the door Brant said, "How the devil should I know?" "I bet he's dead," Nordquist called after him. "I bet somebody he treated dirty caught up with him in the storm. I bet—"

Brant slammed the door.

Chapter 11

Half an hour after Brant had returned to his inept type-setting, men and machines began the arduous task of clearing the streets of Red Rock. Out from the county garage roared the big rotary snowplow, trade-named Snogo, to form the mechanized spearhead of a column of lesser plows and a small army of men with shovels.

The rotary crawled on caterpillar treads, thrusting ahead of itself vertical knives that cut an eight-foot slice out of the solid white. Behind the knives whirled steel scoops that chewed the packed stuff into manageable chunks and hurled them upward, and outward, so that a fat stream of snow arched constantly at the right of the contraption, piling over sidewalks and against building fronts.

Starting at the west end of Superior street, the Snogo clanked and clattered, advancing with ponderous difficulty, finding every inch of the way a battle. Behind it lay a lengthening corridor with straight glittering walls that might have been hewn from alabaster.

The racket of the labored procession penetrated to the printing shop and brought Brant and Quarfield outside, watching with shining eyes. Brant put his hand on her shoulder. "You can go home tonight, Scoop."

She pouted. "What if I don't want to? What if I'd rather stay close to you, where I'll feel safe?"

He looked at her keenly. "If a hard-working newspaper gal like you doesn't get enough of a slave-driving boss like me in the course of 8 or 10 hours, she must be crazy."

She laughed. "I'm crazy, Andy. Everyone else has known it for years, and it's high time you found it out." "All women are nuts," Quarfield stated glumly.

"What about Lola?" Carol asked. "She's nuts, too. Worse than that she's driving me nuts."

"If you weren't batty to start with," Andy put in, "you wouldn't give a woman a chance to bother you. I swore off them when I was a kid."

"Oh yeah?" Quarfield's grin was suggestive. "How about—?"

The rotary plow gave a sudden lunge forward and its motors made a deafening clatter, drowning out the printer's words. Brant wondered vaguely what the other had been going to say, doubting whether he would have had the nerve to mention Ella Macfarlane.

A twinge of something like pain went through him when he thought of her . . .

They had returned to the office and had most of the news that would go into the paper already in type, when the biggest story of all broke without warning.

First came the sudden silence. Brant had not realized how completely the distant clatter of the rotary plow dominated other sound until it ceased. For a second he heard plainly the ticking of Carol's typewriter in the front office, then that too stopped, and it seemed the world was utterly still.

Quarfield spoke first. "She went bust," he said.

But Brant was listening by that time to the shouting outside—the faint hail from the direction of the mill, the querulous answering cries and finally the excited bawling up and down the street. It went on for seconds before his ears distinguished two chilling words:

"Dead man!"

He said, "They've uncovered something!" and sprinted for the door, snatching his cap and coat in passing.

The steel juggernaut had halted in front of the mill. A few men had already gathered around it and others were hastening toward it, pouring out from stores and saloons. Ed Worth was on his way there, his short legs carrying him at a pace just less than a run; he cupped his mittened hands about his mouth and bellowed, "Don't none of you fellows touch nothing!"

Brant started walking swiftly toward the center of interest, feeling a dread so intense that he was hardly conscious of Carol clinging to his arm. He took it for granted from the beginning that this was one more manifestation of the evil that had been loosed with the coming of the storm.

He shouldered his way through the knot of men at the front of the snowplow and stood by Worth, gazing at the curious object projecting from the unbroken snow ahead of the rotary scoops. It took him half a minute to realize that it was the stump of a man's leg, broken off below the knee, with a tatter of cloth fluttering around it and a jagged piece of bone jutting from hard red flesh.

There was sickness in the unshaven face and in the hoarse voice of young Merton Case who had operated the plow. He said, "I was backing out for a fresh start when I see a black thing kicked out with the snow. I didn't know what it was. I'll hit that tree and stick there." Case kept watching the ground but all the others lifted their face toward the ancient elm that spread its snow-covered branches at the corner of Mill Avenue. In the main crotch of the tree, plainly visible was a black rubber-soled boot with three or four inches of a man's naked leg protruding from its top.

The sheriff grunted. "Give me a hand, will you, Andy?"

They pulled together, and the corpse slid out of its sheath—figure crusted with white—and dropped into the soft snow at their feet.

It was Charlie King.

Quarfield seemed less concerned than anyone else there. He volunteered. "It was a bad night for drunks to go stumbling around. Charlie found it out too late."

Something more deliberate than a combination of storm and liquor had overcome the mill worker, however. There were raw streaks in his face where claws or fingernails had ripped the skin. His eyes were open and bulging, his swollen tongue was visible between gasping lips, and his cheeks were a mottled blue.

The sheriff mumbled one word: "Murder."

For an instant his blue eyes, no longer mild, met Brant's. Then he turned and looked for a long time at the stone office building of the paper mill.

PRISON TRAIN REACHES CAMP

Santa Maria, Calif., Oct. 21 (AP) — Passengers of the army's transcontinental prison train "hell run" were lodged Monday in quarters from which escape would be "extremely difficult."

The 141 tough army prisoners, transported from Greenhaven, N. Y., to the disciplinary barracks at nearby Camp Cooke, made the trip a nightmare for their guards with unruliness, escapes and attempted escapes.

Seven escapes in Missouri, Kansas and Colorado. Six were recaptured, one being shot seriously. One man, James D. Anders, 21, of Jamestown, N. Y., made good his escape and is being hunted in Kansas. Scores of attempts to escape from the train were made, every time it slowed down, officers said. Several were shot and wounded by guards.

But Col. Wade D. Killen of Salt Lake City, train commander from there westward, said the trip was without serious incident from Salt Lake City here after the guard was increased to 52 officers and men.

The train fairly bristled with 45 pistols, sub-machine guns and carbines as it passed through Las Vegas, Nev., San Bernardino, Calif., and the outer rail yards of Los Angeles, arriving at Camp Cooke yesterday.

Col. Killen described the men as "habitual criminals, many of them injured to crime before they entered the army." All have been sentenced for serious crimes, many to life sentences. The colonel said escape here would be "extremely difficult; as much so as from any first class state prison."

32 GI BODIES ARRIVE IN EAST

Philadelphia, Oct. 21 (AP) — The bodies of 32 GIs killed in the Pacific war have arrived in Philadelphia.

The caskets, each protected by shipping case, were brought by train from California and taken on Sunday to a railroad siding at the Philadelphia Quartermaster depot.

Eventually, 300 of the approximately 3,000 bodies brought back from the Pacific on the transport Tonda Knot, which arrived in San Francisco Oct. 10, will be shipped here for distribution in eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland.

Unloading will begin today. This completed, each shipping case will be opened for a final inspection of the casket it contains.

Any damage or faulty sealing will be repaired before the next step—the carrying out of family instructions—is taken.

Once inspected and certified, the remains will be distributed in accordance with wishes of the next of kin.

WANT HOUSING AID CONTINUED WITNESSES SAY

Pittsburgh, Oct. 21 (AP)—Congressional sub-committee, holding the first of a dozen hearings in different cities on the housing shortage, heard real estate men urge that the government get out of the housing business and heard many other witnesses declared federal support for the home-building program is still urgently needed.

Testifying yesterday before a Senate-House group headed by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis.), real estate dealers opposed passage of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, designed to speed housing construction.

Slow-Downs Denied

Attorney John B. Nicklas, Jr., representing the real estate board, asserted high costs were due to high wages and union "slow-downs"—a charge promptly denied by George J. Walters, president of the AFL-Building Trades Council.

Nicklas said government housing in Pittsburgh "is nothing but a political football" and that "we don't want government-built, owned and managed homes; we don't want government tax-free homes."

Other real estate men backed his stand but all agreed few homes were being built for less than $9,000.

Normine W. Watkins, executive of the home builders association, said private builders here have a program of more than 10,340 living units for 1948 and that "the home building industry of Allegheny county will solve this problem just as American enterprise produced guns and tanks and ships during the war."

Expresses Alarm

Mayor David L. Lawrence told the committee "we have been disappointed because of the slow progress the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill has made in Congress" and added "we are alarmed at the threat of the discontinuance of all rental controls and the weakening of the present rent ceilings."

Edwin Lehan, representing Local 601, CIO-United Electrical Workers, said "we want Congress to stop dawdling around and pass the bill."

The sub-committee planned another session in Cleveland today, and others in Detroit, Indianapolis and St. Louis on succeeding days.

ELECTORS WILL DECIDE CHANGE IN DEBT LIMIT

Harrisburg, Oct. 21 (AP)—Pennsylvanians will vote on November 4 on question of boosting to $50,000,000 the million dollar state debt limitation that has been in the state constitution since 1874.

The specific question placed before the electorate as worded by Charles M. Morrison, State Secretary of the Commonwealth, reads:

"Shall section four of article nine of the constitution be amended to increase the maximum amount of the state debt to $50,000,000 to supply the deficiencies in revenue: Provided, however, that in determining the limit upon state debt under this section no account shall be taken of debt created prior to this amendment, nor of any debt created under any other section of this article?"

For Highway Bonds

The proviso section of the proposed amendment—it goes on the ballot after passage at two regular sessions of the legislature—refers to a special $100,000,000 bond issue for the construction of highways authorized by a prior amendment to the state constitution in 1923.

This highway bond provision will be eliminated from the basic law if the proposed amendment is approved but state officials say that is of no consequence since the highway bonds were issued long since and most of the obligation already has been paid off.

Requesting approval of the proposal by the 1947 legislature, Governor James H. Duff pointed out in his budget message last March:

Not Needed At Present

"Under our constitution not more than a million dollars may be borrowed to supply deficiencies in revenue. At the last session (1945) an amendment was passed to change this amount from $1,000,000 to $50,000,000 and I recommend its passage in this session."

"The $1,000,000 limit was established when our budget was but a fraction of what it now is. It is impossible to predict two years ahead with accuracy within $1,000,000."

Although the administration at present can foresee no need to use the authority in the current fiscal period, officials pointed out, if it were necessary, enabling legislation could be enacted by the 1949 legislature to permit issuance of bonds to pay off deficiencies in revenue.

In recent years, however, the commonwealth has closed its books with surpluses at the end of fiscal periods.

GETTYSBURG IN CLASSIS HOLDS FEATURE STORY

Gettysburg, along with other outstanding localities in Pennsylvania, gets the spotlight in the October issue of "Eagle," the official publication of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, in an article on Pennsylvania, "Penn's Plenty," written by Maurice P. Splain, Jr.

The author calls the state "A bulwark between east and west," and says "Pennsylvania has played a mighty role as the keystone state." Of Gettysburg, after referring to Valley Forge, Mr. Splain says:

"And a hundred miles to the west, just above the Mason-Dixon line, that forms Pennsylvania's south border, is the equally significant Gettysburg, a little college town where early in July, 1863, was fought the greatest battle in the history of the Americas—one of the decisive battles in world history."

One Illustration

"About 160,000 men took part, and 50,000 were killed or wounded, in that battle which eventually demonstrated that the South could not win the Civil war. The battlefield today is a heavily visited park, dotted by 2,000 markers and monuments."

With the article is a picture of cannon and markers on the battlefield near General Meade's statue and the High Water mark, with the caption: "At Gettysburg, in 1863, was fought the greatest battle in the New World. Field pieces stand at the scene of the fighting. Monuments honor the dead of both sides."

NEW SESSION OF PARLIAMENT IS OPENED BY KING

By TOM WILLIAMS

London, Oct. 21 (AP)—King George VI opened a new session of Parliament today and in a speech written by his Socialist ministers called for Nationalization of the British Gas Industry and for a curb on the powers of the ancient House of Lords. He gave top priority, however, to economic recovery.

Both house sat together in the Lord's chamber for the ceremony starting the third legislative year under the Labor government.

To Trim The Lords

In ten words the king announced the government's momentous decision to trim the authority of the Lords: "Legislation will be introduced to amend the Parliament act, 1911" (their authority is set out in that act).

A high government source confirmed that this cryptic statement was announcement of a cabinet decision, reached yesterday, to limit the power of the peers.

"A bill will be laid before you to bring the Gas Industry under public ownership in the completion of the plan for the coordination of the fuel and power industries," the king said, giving a preview of the Socialist program for the coming year.

Important Omission

No mention was made of the nationalization of the iron and steel industry, another Socialist objective. Political observers expressed belief that the government might be holding off on this until it could restrict the Lords' authority and thus make sure the Lords could not obstruct such a move.

"The first aim of my ministers," the king declared, "will be to redress the adverse balance of payments, particularly by expanding exports."

He said his government would "continue to participate in the work of European reconstruction put in hand in the recent conference in Paris."

See Election Call

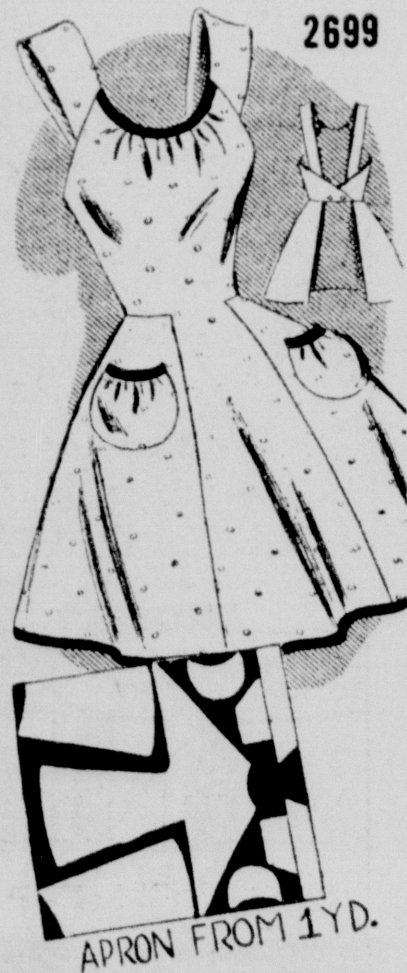

"The present obstacles to cooperation and understanding between the peoples of the world," he said, "have strengthened the determination of my government to support the United Nations and to seek by that means to promote the mutual trust and tolerance on which peaceful progress depends."

The overwhelming Conservative majority in the House of Lords is in contrast to the Labor majority in the House of Commons.

One well informed political observer speculated that the Conservative opposition would demand that the whole issue of the Lords' authority be submitted to the country at an early general election on the grounds the government has no electoral mandate for reform in the House of Lords.

Good Care, Here

Local inmates have private or semi-private rooms and are permitted to keep their personal possessions in the room with them, the discussion disclosed. Those that wish and can obtain them have radios and similar articles in their rooms and there are radios in the parlors of each building for those who wish to use them.

Mrs. Verna Myers reported on the aid given by the assistance board to those in need. "One of the most widely spread misconceptions about the assistance board's work is that it gives an old age pension," Mrs. Myers said. "What we give are old age benefits, which is much different. A pension is a sum that goes to all alike. Benefits are based on need. Thus one person will receive more than another according to need."

Does Not Seek Homes

"Another misconception is that the assistance office takes away the home before it gives assistance. That is not true. We are not interested in obtaining property. The only thing is, the state thinks of the home as a resource, just as any other property might be. So it puts a judgment against the house for repayment of what it might give. But the state is not going to evict anyone, or take over any houses."

"Since each case is based on need, the checks are all different. In addition, in a home where a husband and wife are both obtaining assistance the man's check would be slightly higher than the woman's because the Department of Agriculture believes that men need slightly more food than women."

She also explained how benefits given by the assistance board cannot go beyond a certain figure and thus when needs arise a person on receiving DPA aid may also receive county out-door relief.

Help Pay Rent

"An example of that would be the case of a mother and dependent children who cannot get any other quarters but the rent is above the amount permitted under DPA. In that case the county would probably pay the remainder of the rent," Mrs. Myers said.

During the discussion it was pointed out that the county home averages about 75 guests and could hold about 90.

The next meeting of the welfare council will be held December 1 at which time reports will be made on the November 17 welfare conference sessions at Pittsburgh.

The president, Mrs. R. S. Saby, presided at the meeting.

tion of 35 teachers, the second 23 teachers; third, 23; fourth, 16; fifth, 17; sixth, 57 and seventh, 25. The teachers from each district will elect one member of the executive committee for each 15 teachers or fraction thereof in their district.

Members of the redistricting committee included Clyde McCauslin, chairman; Lloyd Staveland, Frank E. Basehore, Wilson Wenk, Robert Reindollar and C. P. Keefer. The districts will elect their representatives "about institute time," the county branch president, Arthur Gordon, announced today.

President Gordon was named as one of four classroom teacher delegates from the Southern Convention District of the PSEA to the National Education Association convention at the meeting of the convention group at Hershey last week. It was reported at the meeting Monday, Leslie V. Stock, superintendent of the Upper County schools, was named as one of the four administrator representatives to the National Education Association meeting.
